

ProQuest Historical Newspapers™

Lisle Library District Cardholders:

Historical Newspapers content is among researchers' most sought-after primary source material. This database provides access to over 100 million digitized pages from newspaper archives dating back to the 1800s.

Access Steps:

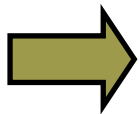

From Your Computer:

Go to: lislelibrary.org/databases

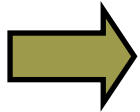

Select "Historical Newspapers."

Enter your library card number and PIN. Click "Login."

GETTING STARTED:

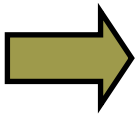

Historical Newspapers include 4 databases: Chicago Tribune (1849-1998), Civil War Era, The Wall Street Journal (1889-2011), and The Washington Post (1877-2007).

For basic searches on all databases enter your search term and click  from the homepage.

To target a particular database, on the toolbar, click "Change Databases" to view the list and select or deselect the databases you need. Then click "Use selected databases."

You can further refine and narrow your search by clicking "Advanced Search." In the first row, enter one or more words in the box. Following the box is a drop-down of search fields such as Author, Document title or Publication title. Select from the list or leave the default "Anywhere." Click "Search." You can limit your search even further by Publication date and Document type.
